

GLOBAL DIVERSITY & INCLUSION BENCHMARKS: STANDARDS FOR ORGANIZATIONS AROUND THE WORLD (GDIB)
By Julie O'Mara, Alan Richter, and 95 Expert Panelists

PERMISSION AGREEMENT

REQUIREMENTS FOR USE

The Global Diversity & Inclusion Benchmarks: Standards for Organizations Around the World (GDIB) is powered by The Centre for Global Inclusion, a US 501c3 nonprofit organization, and is distributed free of charge with the permission of its authors, Julie O'Mara and Alan Richter. It is provided in a PDF file format and distributed via the Internet, although it is also available in other formats and may be distributed elsewhere.

The authors, the Expert Panelists, and others who have been involved in the development, enhancement, and sponsorship of the GDIB have done so with a mission of advancing the Diversity & Inclusion field. To stimulate the widest use possible, the GDIB is provided at no cost in the hope that practitioners will share it with others and incorporate the thinking and value it represents in their work. Users are invited to engage with the authors and Expert Panelists to offer suggestions for improvement and achievement of the goals of increasing the visibility, usability, and relevance of the GDIB.

There is no fee to obtain permission or use the GDIB; however, users must adhere to the following requirements and restrictions when using the GDIB:

- Requirement #1: Use of the GDIB constitutes an agreement to adhere to the copyright laws of the United States of America.
- Requirement #2: Always attribute any or all portions of the work by including this statement in a prominent position: "From Global Diversity-& Inclusion Benchmarks: Standards for Organizations Around the World © 2017 Julie O'Mara and Alan Richter. Used with permission. All Rights Reserved."
- Requirement #3: Do not create translations or develop related or derivative works or versions based on the GDIB without special written permission from the authors.
- Requirement #4: For all GDIB-related communication, follow The Centre for Global Inclusion Style Guide, which is at www.centreforglobalinclusion.org.
- Requirement #5: Review communications sent by The Centre on a timely basis in order to stay updated on changes and additions to the GDIB. These include its monthly newsletters and occasional emails or other notices. By signing this agreement the users are providing affirmative consent to receive its communications whether sent directly or through a provider, such as Constant Contact, Inc.

PROCESS TO RECEIVE PERMISSION

- Step 1: Read Requirements for Use above and the Frequently Asked Questions below. Be sure you are able to comply with all items.
- Step 2: Download this Permission Agreement and save on your computer.
- Step 3: Then – once it is saved on your computer -- complete the form. It is designed for computer entry. You do not need to print it out. A typed signature is a legally binding signature. See instructions on the form.
- Step 4: Save the completed form to your computer.
- Step 5: Attach your completed form and email it to jeanne.spahr@centreforglobalinclusion.org.
- Step 6: The authors will review your request and, if approved, will sign the Permission Agreement and email it back to you within a few days. Please keep the executed copy on file and be sure those in your organization with a need to know are knowledgeable about the requirements of use.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

May we pass GDIB along to others to look at before we request permission? Yes, please do; no permission is required to simply show the GDIB to others as long as you are simply sharing copies of the GDIB in its original form and format and with all copyright notices intact.

What constitutes "using" the GDIB? Any application of the GDIB, in part or whole, for purposes of education, training, communication, strategy, assessment, measurement, or other purposes constitutes use.

May we send GDIB to our employees and ask them to read it as part of their D&I education? Yes, but you must obtain signed permission and include attribution because this constitutes use in our agreement.

May we put all or portions of GDIB on our website? Yes, but only if this Permission Agreement is signed and the requirements followed.

I am a consultant. If I obtain permission to use the GDIB in my consulting work, does that allow all my clients to use it? No. Each client must complete the permission process.

May we use portions of the GDIB in publications, blogs, presentations, webinars and the like? Yes. GDIB is copyrighted and as such all US copyright laws apply. Therefore, you may cite up to 300 words without signing this Permission Agreement or requesting permission. For more than 300 words or to use the Model or any other graphics, you will need to obtain permission. For GDIB citation (based on Chicago Style), use: O'Mara, Julie, and Richter, Alan, Global Diversity & Inclusion Benchmarks (www.centreforglobalinclusion.org, 2017), PDF.

May we customize the GDIB? Yes, but only with special written permission and involvement of the authors. Please note that because care has been taken to consider and respect the opinions of the authors and the Expert Panelists, we are unlikely to approve any proposed customization that alters the substance of the GDIB or that does not follow The Centre for Global Inclusion Style Guide.

May we "brand" the GDIB with our organization logo or include a letter of instruction or endorsement? Yes. That is encouraged as long as certain requirements are followed, including maintaining the "look and feel" of the GDIB and ensuring that all the accessibility requirements are met. You must contact the authors to discuss this at TheCentre@centreforglobalinclusion.org.

May we create a Special Edition or translate GDIB to another language? The authors are very interested in special editions and translations. Engagement of the authors and formal written permission and review is required.

May we develop tools, including assessment tools, materials, slide shows, and the like related to the GDIB? Possibly, but you must obtain special written permission from the authors for any such development and use and include attribution. We expect that such tools and materials will generally be offered to the public free of charge. Please see below for guidance on use of the GDIB or derivatives of the GDIB to generate revenue.

May we sell tools, including assessment tools, materials, slide shows, and the like related to the GDIB? Possibly, but only with special written permission from the authors to ensure that the free version of GDIB is not compromised. If you wish to charge a fee for any tools or materials related to or based on the GDIB, you must contact the authors to discuss your request. Please note that the authors may decide not to grant such permission, and any permission they do grant may be subject to additional conditions.

How do I obtain special written permission from the authors? Please email both authors, Julie O'Mara and Alan Richter, Ph.D. at julie.omara@centreforglobalinclusion.org and alan.richter@centreforglobalinclusion.org.

May I charge a fee for consulting services or to cover expenses to use the GDIB? Yes, as long as you clearly communicate that the GDIB itself is free and that anyone can use the GDIB at no charge and without consultant services. Consultants can add value in using the GDIB. However, it is required that the GDIB itself be provided for free and that the client or end user is aware that the GDIB is available for no charge. In our opinion, it is unethical to infer ownership of the GDIB, if that is not the case.

Does a permission request from one division or location of an organization cover all portions or units of the organization? Not necessarily. Please complete the required information as to which organizational unit(s) are requesting permission and assure that the person signing the form is authorized to sign for all units.

What wording should we use for attribution and how should it be displayed? "From Global Diversity and Inclusion Benchmarks: Standards for Organizations Around the World © 2017 Julie O'Mara and Alan Richter. Used with permission. All Rights Reserved." Attribution must be prominently displayed.

If I received permission to use a prior version of the GDIB (2006, 2011, 2014, 2016), does that permission apply to the current (2017) version as well? No. Use of the 2017 version is subject to the terms of this Permission Agreement. You must obtain permission as outlined here in order to use the 2017 version.

Does permission to use the GDIB also cover related GDIB User Tools provided on The Centre for Global Inclusion website? Yes, and the User Tools are subject to the same permissions and attribution requirements as the GDIB.

Does this Agreement terminate at any point in time? The authors reserve the right to terminate this agreement for any reason with thirty (30) days written notice.

Where may I find additional copies of this Agreement and other materials related to the GDIB? Go to www.centreforglobalinclusion.org.
