NEWS AND IDEAS ABOUT & FROM USERS AND EXPERT PANELISTS

Do you have news and/or best practices to announce/share? Information you need? Send and we’ll share it.

"WE MUST DO A BETTER JOB OF SPREADING THE WORD ABOUT THE GDIB," SAYS EP DAVID TULIN

David Tulin’s biggest takeaway from discussing the GDIB on a panel, Implementing Diversity and Inclusion in Organizations: Challenges and Opportunities, at the Annual Conference of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology, April 25 in Philadelphia --- was that we need to do a better job of telling others about the GDIB. He feels we have “too much humility” about the GDIB and need to promote it more. About 100 people attended the session and as far as he could tell no one knew about the GDIB. Yet when he talked about it and showed the model and some of the benchmarks, participants could see that it is a great contribution and just what they are looking for — and it’s free. David then had several great conversations with others after the session. David called us (Julie and Alan) with many ideas about what we can do to spread the word. They include actions such as:

• Asking all newsletter readers to tell five others about GDIB ... and suggesting they ask to be added to this newsletter list.
• Getting on more conference programs
• Writing about GDIB in book chapters and articles
• Contributing to blogs, tweets, postings in social media and so forth
• Seeking funds for support
• Looking for all kinds of opportunities to spread the word...

This is not the first time we've heard that "GDIB is D&I's best kept secret." We are taking what David is saying to heart so you will see us providing you with more information that you can use to promote the GDIB and we'll help you with conference proposals and articles. Just let us know.
GDIB MENTIONED IN PODCAST FEATURING EP MUSHIM IKEDA
Sponsored by the Secular Buddhist Association, the Podcast focuses on how The East Bay Meditation Center in Oakland, California is creating diverse Sanghas, which are spiritual communities. It is applicable across sectors. Mushim, a core teacher, and Brenda Salgado, the executive director, describe actions they are taking to engage a diverse community. Here are two examples of techniques mentioned that apply for all sectors: It is important to have teachers of color even if they teach the same content and use the same techniques as a white teacher would – the fact that the message comes from someone similar to the learner increases the impact. In dialogue groups if someone has spoken once, they must wait even if it means sitting in silence, until others have spoken before they can speak again as this shows respect to others by not dominating. There are more examples – the way Mushim describes these actions/strategies make them easily applicable across sectors. Go to this link to hear the entire 1 hour and 18 minute Podcast: http://secularbuddhism.org/2015/04/26/episode-222-mushim-ikeda-and-brenda-salgado-creating-diverse-sanghas/ Mushim mentions the GDIB as a helpful tool for organizations saying that they must look at many aspects of diversity, not just recruiting people in order to get their “butts in seats.”

NEWS, REQUESTS, AND IDEAS FROM JULIE, ALAN, AND THE DIVERSITY COLLEGIUM

DO YOU HAVE EXPERIENCE WITH A KICKSTARTER CAMPAIGN?
We’d like to do something quick to generate some funds to support our research and growing requests for GDIB. We’re wondering if a Kickstarter Campaign could meet our needs and seek the assistance of someone in our network to help. Let us know if you would be willing to help.

GDIB RESEARCH UPDATE
In May the Expert Panelists will start Round Two of the research process to update GDIB for release in early 2016. This will be our tenth anniversary edition and the second substantive update ... the first edition was in 2006, the second in 2011, and a minor update in 2014 (when the nonprofit The Diversity Collegium became a sponsor). If you are a reader of this newsletter, we welcome any suggestions from you as well.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN AN ONLINE GDIB ASSESSMENT TOOL?
We ran this request in the February 11th issue of this newsletter. Since then, we have received several additional requests, so we are hoping to take action soon. We are also considering creating a simple checklist as well as a more robust tool. If you haven’t let us know of your interest in either a simple checklist or robust tool, please let us know. Here’s what we said February 11: Many people have expressed interest in having an online assessment tool based on the GDIB. We are interested in creating one. Of course, we want it to be psychometrically sound and user-friendly. We want something more robust and accurate than a checklist. We’re talking with several people about how to make this happen. Significant funding will be needed to create the tool, test it, market it, and support it. Let us know if you would be interested in an assessment tool and whether or not you might be interested in joining a consortium to make this happen.

WEPAN – Women in Engineering ProActive Network
GDIB users Joan Buccigrossi, Ph.D., and Tchernavia Rocker will conduct a plenary session at this conference “Measuring Culture Change Using the Global Diversity and Inclusion Benchmarks Tool.” From the conference program description: Joan Buccigrossi, formerly the Director of Global Diversity and Inclusion at Rockwell Automation, and Tchernavia Rocker, General Manager, Employee Relations & Workplace Environment at Harley-Davidson Motor Company, will tell you how they adapted the Global Diversity and Inclusion Benchmarks tool (GDIB) to guide diversity and inclusion efforts of leaders and employees in their respective companies. Certain aspects of D&I can be measured with traditional demographic metrics. For example, how many women are in leadership roles, or what percentage of women and people of color were recruited into the organization in a give time period. While these metrics are important, they only tell part of the story. Learn how Rockwell Automation and Harley-Davidson used the GDIB to drive and measure culture change toward building a more inclusive workplace for all employees! WEPAN is a non-profit educational organization founded in 1990 to be a catalyst for change to enhance the success of women in the engineering professions. It has both individual and institutional memberships. Go to: www.wepan.org To register for the conference, go to: http://www.wepan.org/?page=A7
